Newly graduated and full of belief for a better world, Andy and Norman have set up a pocket sized business, running their own political magazine from their San Francisco apartment. All is well in their world until Sophie moves in next door - an ex-Olympian swimmer and all round southern belle! Norman instantly goes nuts for her, Andy tries to hold it together, and sure enough all hell lets loose! A fire-cracker of a comedy, with split-second timing, and delivered at a pace that will leave you breathless. Beat the winter blues and see just how hot January can get!
